Cyber bullying

by Rudraveer Singh
BCA-1B
27/11/2025

Cyber bullying is the act of using digital devices such as computers, mobiles, laptops, tablets, or any device through which you can access the internet, to harass, target or threaten an individual or a specific group. In todays world where technology prevails, its too easy for individuals to target others and push them into a state of despair and confusion which may lead to the victims take some harsh decisions. It is not uncommon these days and it's very likely that at this very second, someone may still be getting bullied online. Let's take a look at the types of bullyings that happen very often.

- Harassment: sending others abusive, threatening messages or posts.

- Doxxing: tricking or leaking others personal information or address(es) and using those to your benefit.

- Trolling: annoying, provoking or taunting others on purpose.

- Stalking: obsessively following, spying on a person.

- Catfishing: using fictious or younger images of people to manipulate your victims.

These are just five of many forms of cyber bullying that exist and ruin millions of lives. If you know someone or you youself indulge in cyber bullying, stop. The offenders might enjoy doing so, but not many people know of the victims reaction.

cyberbullying
by Rudraveer Singh
BCA-1B
27/11/2025

Cyber bullying is the act of using digital devices such as computers, mobiles, laptops, tablets, or any device through which you can access the internet, to harass, target or threaten an individual or a specific group. In today's world where technology prevails, it's too easy for individuals to target others and push them into a state of despair and confusion which may lead to the victims take some harsh decisions. It is not uncommon these days and it's very likely that at this very second, someone may still be getting bullied online. Let's take a look at the types of bullying's that happen very often.
Harassment: sending others abusive, threatening messages or posts.
Doxxing: tricking or leaking others personal information or address(es) and using those to your benefit.
Trolling: annoying, provoking or taunting others on purpose.
Stalking: obsessively following, spying on a person.
Catfishing: using fictious or younger images of people to manipulate your victims.
These are just five of many forms of cyber bullying that exist and ruin

206 Words | 1334 Characters   ⟲ Recheck   📋   ⬇ Download Report
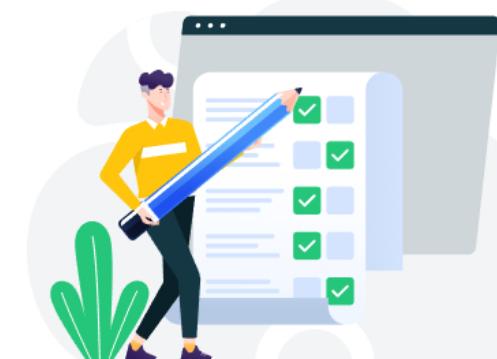

Unique   100%
Exact   0%
Partial   0%
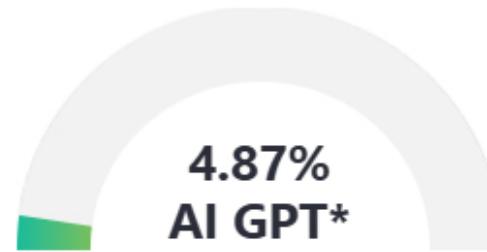

View Plagiarized Sources

Congratulations
Plagiarism not found!

Cyber bullying

 by Rudraveer Singh

BCA-1B

27/11/2025

 Cyber bullying is the act of using digital devices such as computers, mobiles, laptops, tablets, or any device through which you can access the internet, to harass, target or threaten an individual or a specific group. In today's world where technology prevails, it's too easy for individuals to target others and push them into a state of despair and confusion which may lead to the victims take some harsh decisions. It is not uncommon these days and it's very likely that at this very second, someone may still be getting bullied online. Let's take a look at the types of bullying's that happen very often.

Harassment: sending others abusive, threatening messages or posts.

Doxxing: tricking or leaking others personal information or address(es) and using those to your benefit.

Grammar & Spell Checked

Cyberbullying

by Rudraveer Singh

BCA-1B

27/11/2025

Cyberbullying is the act of using digital devices such as computers, mobiles, laptops, tablets, or any device through which you can access the internet to harass, target , or threaten an individual or a specific group. In today's world, where technology prevails, it's too easy for individuals to target others and push them into a state of despair and confusion, which may lead the victims to take some harsh decisions. It is not uncommon these days, and it's very likely that at this very second, someone may still be getting bullied online. Let's take a look at the types of bullying that happen very often.

Harassment: sending others abusive, threatening messages or posts.

Doxxing: tricking or leaking others' personal information or address(es) and using those to your benefit.

Trolling: annoying, provoking, or taunting others on purpose.

Stalking: obsessively following or spying on a person.

Catfishing: using fictious or younger images of people to manipulate your victims.

These are just five of many forms of cyberbullying that exist and ruin millions of lives. If you know someone or you yourself indulge in cyberbullying , stop. The offenders might enjoy doing so, but not many people know of the victim's reaction.